Fees Issue Up For Discussion

On Remembrance Day

It is November 11 once more — Remembrance Day, Armistice Day — the Commemoration of the peace treaty which ended the First World War. The nations of the West have set aside this day to pay silent tribute to the dead of that war to end war, and of all the wars in the ensuing forty years.

Not without respect for the dead, not without a realization of our own debt to them, we think that for this age the last comment on war may be the simple, ironic finality of this poem by Carl Sandburg:

Grass

Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz and Waterloo.
Shovel them under and let me work —
I am the grass; I cover all.
And pile them high at Gettysburg
And pile them high at Ypres and Verdun.
Shovel them under and let me work.
Two years, ten years, and passengers ask the conductor:

What place is this?
Where are we now?

I am the grass.
Let me work.

Society Meeting Today Tackles Funds Problem

High student fees and low government grants will be the topics of discussion at this afternoon's meeting of the McGill Students' Society.

Society President Roy Heenan has called the meeting to review proposals contained in his Open Letter to McGill students which appeared in the DAILY of Nov. 3.

Proceedings will begin at 1 pm. in the ballroom of the Union. There are two main issues at stake. The first is, that in view of the Provincial Government's reluctance to discuss the problem of statutory provincial grants to Quebec Universities and in view of the fact that these universities are being 'stangled' by a lack of sufficient funds, the students of the province should unite to present a petition to the Legislative Assembly in Quebec City. The second issue is that if McGill should receive higher grants from either provincial or federal sources, some of the relief should be passed on to the students in the form of lower fees.

QUORUM REQUIRED

All undergraduate students of the university and all partial students taking three or more courses are members of the Students' Society. Three hundred must attend the meeting in order to provide a quorum. No business can be transacted without a quorum.

MEETING TODAY
TIME: 1 pm
PLACE: Union Ballroom
ISSUE: Financial crises
All students are requested to attend.

The predicament of universities in this province is well-known.

Mr. Duplessis regards higher education as the parents' responsibility and refuses to meet student leaders who wish to confer with him on the topic of statutory grants. His intransigent attitude and meticulous safeguarding of fields which are referred to the provincial governments in the B.N.A. Act, further embarrass the universities who find themselves unable to accept federal grants.

This Morning's Headlines

News of National and World Significance

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 — A giant Super-Constellation cargo plane went out of control at Idlewild Airport today, destroying a TCA Viscount and endangering hundreds of lives. Spewing flames on takeoff, the cargo plane headed for a busy terminal building and rammed the unloaded Montreal-bound Viscount which was due to take on passengers six minutes later. Eight people suffered minor injuries.

DAMASCUS, Nov 10 — Radio Baghdad today announced that Iraq's Supreme Military Court has sentenced ex-Premier Fadhil Jamali to be hanged along with two other military leaders for their part in the July coup.

The Four New Governors

The Board of Governors last night announced the election of four new members, bringing the number of Trustees of the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning to its full statutory complement of twenty-five. These four men, each a leader in the world outside the university, replace Governors, recently retired, who have left an indelible mark on the history of McGill. To fill the positions vacated by such men as J. W. McConnell and Bertie Gardner will not be an easy task.

The position of Governor of a university is sometimes regarded as one with little responsibility and much prestige, conferred upon those who have achieved success in the world of finance and commerce. In fact, the authority invested in these men is overwhelming. According to the statutes, they are "to provide responsible management and government of the affairs, including academic control of the curriculum and courses of study, of McGill College and University. They make all appointments and all contracts on behalf of the University and possess general jurisdiction and final authority over the conduct of its affairs".

The newly elected Governors are all well known for their contributions to the economic development of our country. They have all demonstrated a sincere interest in the welfare of the community. But now they assume a grave responsibility — the training of the future leaders, not only of Canada, but of the entire world.

There are many issues which face these men as they join the McGill community. The fees are higher than at any other Canadian university; the professors' salaries are much too low and the enrollment is expected to double within the next few years. Add to these items the many particular problems posed by the fact that McGill is situated in the Province of Quebec and you have a rough idea of the burdens which go with the title of Governor.

We ask these four men to assume their responsibilities with sincerity and honest devotion. Theirs is a vital role in the future development of our country and our University.

We welcome them to Old McGill.

Today's Meeting

Today, the Students' Society meets for the first time this year. These meetings are the direct concern of every student on campus; they are, in fact, the only chance the student has to participate in matters of his own government.

Outside of the elected representatives of each faculty, students of McGill can only voice their opinions in a general meeting of this type, which is held at least once a term. In order for the meeting to be empowered to transact any business, at least 300 members of the Students' Society are needed to constitute a quorum.

There are many things in this University which could be improved in both student government and the University administration. The President of the Students' Society is the only official spokesman for all McGill students, and his views and opinions should be close to those of the campus. The only formal contact with his public comes to the President through these meetings.

Recently the President published an open letter to all students dealing with the subject of reduced fees, which is close to everyone's pocketbook. The issues discussed in this letter will be presented at the Students' Society meeting, and it is of prime importance to have each individual student participate in a matter directly concerning him.

Only through a resolution drafted and decided on at this meeting will the President have any power to present the case for lower fees to the University and the Provincial Government.

It would be foolish indeed to ignore this meeting.

Where Are The Meds?

To The Editor:

At this time of the year, many, I feel sure, will share my sense of bewilderment, at the conspicuously low percentage of blood donation that usually comes from the faculty of medicine. One would expect medical students to turn out as one man on an occasion of this sort, for this should be a matter of the greatest personal and professional concern to them. No one knows better of the incalculable value of these offerings in saving human life, nor of the negligible risk run by the donors in their vigorous youth, in so worthy a cause. Since this privilege comes to McGill but once a year, I must confess to an apprehension that the reasons for this feeble response may lie quite deep. One can only hope that humanity, sensitivity to suffering, and the passion to alleviate it, which have long been considered to be the distinguishing attributes of this noble profession, are not losing their hold on the modern medical student due to an excessive emphasis on technical knowledge, competence and training.

Misplaced Keys

To The Editor

I was at the University service in Christ Church Cathedral on Sunday afternoon and was rather startled to see in attendance there members of the Scarlet Key Society wearing their red and white sweaters. Now these sweaters are the ideal thing for wear at football and hockey games (and here I have absolutely no objection to them), but at Convocation and other more academic functions such as this service, where faculty members wore hoods and gowns, is not a more suitable dress possible? Something along the lines of the Red Wing Society's blazers, or even those scarlet gowns of the St. Andrew's University undergraduates we hear so much about, would seem to me eminently preferable.

Bulchak's Condition Reported Improved

(Special to the Daily)

The following is the latest report on Wally Bulchak, injured McGill Redman back-fielder who suffered a concussion in Saturday's football contest in tackling Pete Joyce of Varsity.

Bulchak was admitted into the emergency ward of the Toronto General Hospital suffering from a paralysis on his left side.

Most of the paralysis subsided in a few hours and no surgery was required.

Dr. Crupchlow, Redman team physician, informed the Daily that Bulchak was in satisfactory condition and is being looked after by Dr. Lougheed, head of the neurological division at the Toronto General Hospital. He is under continuous observation, since it is possible, in cases of this type, for the condition to change. A partial paralysis still exists around Bulchak's forehead and side of the face. Although weak, Bulchak has regained practically full movement of his left arm, although the fingers of this hand are still partially paralysed.

When asked of the possibility of permanent disability to the third year Dentistry student, Dr. Crupchlow told us that it was extremely difficult to make predictions at this time. He did express the opinion, however, that Bulchak has improved very well and that Dr. Lougheed and himself were quite pleased and quite optimistic that Bulchak will make a recovery to full usefulness. Bulchak will remain in hospital for at least two weeks. There is no chance of him being moved to Montreal since Wally is from Toronto. Dr. Crupchlow told us that this was the most potentially serious injury suffered by a McGill player in the twelve years he has been associated with the club.

U.N. Club Plans New York Tour

Next week-end a tour sponsored by the United Nations Club of McGill will leave for New York City. The trip's purpose is to give students an opportunity to see the headquarters of the United Nations.

The bus will pull out Friday, November 14, at 2 p.m., and will be back on Monday morning, November 17, in time for lectures. The 25-dollar cost of the week-end will include the trip to New York, accommodations, and a guided tour of the Secretariat Building, near the East River. Students of other universities in Montreal have also been invited.

All those interested are asked

SEC Recommends Unity In Petitioning Assembly

McGill has $4 million held in trust for her in Ottawa.

Today's meeting is intended to extend action taken by students last year when they boycotted lectures for a day. The boycott was considered an unqualified success in that the vast majority of students complied with the 'strike' decisions taken by their leaders. Only one Quebec University balked at the idea. Students of government-subsidized Sherbrooke refused to 'go on strike' when faculty-members threatened to resign their posts if any such action were taken.

One of the main purposes of last year's boycott was to awaken the province's population to the plight of her universities. To this end, a free student publication was distributed throughout the province, giving detailed background to the whole question.

PETITION LEGISLATURE

Student leaders feel that the public should be kept aware of the vital issues at stake. Public sympathy would lend much to the Universities' cause. It is with this in mind that they have recommended that students unite to petition the Legislative Assembly. In the opinion of SEC member Anthony Lafleur, "this is one of the strongest legal actions we could take. Only a couple of times in the country's history have such petitions been presented." Petitioning the Assembly is not to be confused with petitioning individual members of the Assembly; an action which is fairly common.

Stated Heenan in his Open Letter, "This (petition) will enable the university students of Quebec to have their plight both heard and debated in the Legislature."

Closely tied to this situation is the fact that, as the recipient of low grants, McGill is forced to charge high tuition fees. McGill students pay, on the average, $250 more for tuition than students of other Canadian Universities.

A major result of the fee hike was to decrease student enrolment at McGill. It is significant that there are 120 less students starting in first year engineering this year than last. It is for this reason that those at the meeting will be asked to approve a policy which will ask that university authorities grant a reduction in fees if any substantial sums of money are given McGill by either the Provincial or Federal governments. "Should any relief be given by means of government funds, it is only right that some relief should be passed on to the students."

C.U.S.A.C. Art Exhibit Reviewed Here

by Peter Duffield

On Monday an exhibition of Canadian art was put on show in the Walter M. Stewart room of the Union. This exhibition of pen and ink, charcoal drawings and some watercolors was sponsored by the Canadian University Student Artistic Committee, of which McGill is a member.

Few people have heard of this organization and fewer still know what it stands for; however this national committee was originally the idea of a former McGill student and one from the University of Montreal, who together in 1956 arranged a meeting between interested Canadian universities in Ottawa. The outcome of this meeting was the formation of the above mentioned committee, the aims of which are to promote the interest of students in Canadian art. The Governor General at that time offered to be their patron.

The universities represented stretch from one end of Canada to the other, from Mount Allison University to the University of British Columbia, all of whom took part in the selection of works and who will present this exhibition to their students at some time during the year. The exhibition comes to us from Mount Allison University by way of Queen's and its next destination will be the University of Montreal.

The exhibition itself consists of works by artists, who represent to a large extent the younger painters in Canada. I will not try to describe each drawing nor one by each artist, but will mention those which interested me and which I felt stood out from the rest. Especially by those who do not have any previous knowledge of Canadian art.

The first two drawings that caught my eye were "Itchy Toe" and "Dependence-Independence" by Patricia Pidoux. These were studies of nudes, semi-realistic, and executed with flowing lines that focused one's attention on the subject. Then there was "Preparation" by Elizabeth Anand, a Halifax artist, that caught the feeling of students in attitudes of study; in fact it could have been drawn in the Redpath Library.

John Gould's "Lovers" is very strong in its message, although one of the figures reminded me of Hieronymus Bosch, a fifteenth century so-called surrealist. Along the same lines was Kelly Clark's "Portrait of a Young Boy". I could not make up my mind whether there was supposed to be more to the drawing than was first apparent. It seemed to me that there was some kind of symbolism involved. The abstracts and semi-abstracts were also in evidence. Of the former there was "Sumari" by Roland Giguere which reminds one of Chinese calligraphy, while Frank Lipari's "Bird" was one of black lines with the occasional piece of silver leaf.

There were a few that I did not think measured up to the rest, one of which was Dallaire's "Woman with a Hat", a cubistic "Modigliani". Although technically well executed, I did not think it demonstrated his biting sarcasm that can usually be found in his paintings.

This exhibition is the first of two to come to McGill this year sponsored by C.U.S.A.C. The second will be an exhibit of oil paintings by leading Canadian artists and will be displayed in the Library in February.
